Hynakono, May 12th, 1886.

Says the China Mail: -" It will be news to most residents who know something-about the relative fiscal systems of India and China, to be told, as they are told by our contemporary [the Daily Press], that the fairly-levied and honestly collected salt tax in India bears an exact analogy to the doings of the filt Commission of the Provinces of China." The statement that anything the kind was over said by the Daily Press has no foundation. The remarks we have quoted occur in an article in which our con temporary enters upon a defence of certain ill-considered remarks made by Mr. Evere in the Legislative Council, which had formed the subject of criticism in this column. Mr RYRIEsaid :- "Saltisa necessity of life, and if they smuggle it from Hongkong I say le them smuggle it." We enderroured show that the fact of any article being a neconsity of life was not in itself a justification for smaggling that article, and in the course of our argument said :- " As for the duty on salt being an oppression, the people of India are subjected to similar oppression—if that is the proper term for it—under British rule." This remark has no reference whatever to the manner in which the duty is collected such reference being in fact expressly excluded by a subsequent remark that the "selection of this article for taxation, the amountlevied on it, and the manner in which the recenue is collected are all fair subjects for criticism." The issue was simple. Mr. RYBIS defended the smuggling of salt be cause it is a necessity of life, and it taxation therefore, according to his view, an oppression. We contended that the taxation of salt was not necessarily an oppression, pointing out that it was taxed in India, and that the fact of an article being a necessity of life was not a sufficient excuse for smugglingit. When this preliminary issue is disposed of a consideration of the conduct of the Silt Commission may be satered on occasion should arise. Mr. Rynie, however, did not formulate any charges against the Salt Commission beyond saying it was a monopoly and that it oppressed the people, such Singapore on the 29th ult. was a great success, oppression consisting, so far as can be gathered from his remarks, in the levying of duty on a necessity of life. If, however, we concede the point which we understand to be contended forby the China Mail, that what Mr. Rypre meant was that salt emnggling was justifiable not because salt is a necessity of lifewhich however, is what he said,—but because the proceedings of the Salt Commission are unjust, we fail to see that the position of the hon, gentleman is in any way improved. No interference by the Chinese authorities as between the residents of this island and the British Government can be tolersied, and, per contra, neither can any claim be advanced on the part of the Authorities of Hongkong to interfere as between the Chinese Government and its subjects. theChinese do not get their salt on the terms they would like that affords no excuse for a that they should resort to amuggling. Mr. liest interest in the enterprise.

Japanese came from that region, and at a carly age, because the legend of the flood is unknown in Japan, which is also wanting in the eldest Babylonian inscriptions.

The other portion of the Japanese which avidently immigrated later, probably came from more southern districts—from Tonquin, or elsewhere in Indo-China. There is certainly a very striking resemblance between the lower type and the inhabitants of those countries. I have frequently shown to Japanese photographs from Saigon, and they were always taken for those of their countrymen. A type always appears more distinctly in the temple sex than in males, so that the ethnographer who wishes to study types-will-do-well-to more closely observe the women. For the body of the man, by labour and circumstances, is in fluenced in a very much greater degree than is the case with women. This does not, of course, apply to peoples in a very low state of civilisa. tion, where the women must work as much as the men. But the Japanese are a civilized people. A Japanese woman works much less than a German; she nurses and takes care of herself as much as she can, and is less exposed to exterior modifying influences She offers, therefore, an excellent object for study with regard to the purity of the hereditary type.

Between the two types mentioned there is found, middle type, which, according to our ideasmust be considered as the healthiest and strongast. It is not so coarse as the lower type but, on the other hand, it has not the sickly delicacy of the finer type. In Europe quite erroneous conceptions are entertained of the physical strength and structure of the Japanese, based aron the appearance of the numerous young students manded a Brigade in Bormah, is reported to have and scholars now sojourning there. In Japan the higher classes are by far the weakliest and most delicate, whereas measurements made in Europe show that the higher classes are both taller and of greater circumference of chest, and it has been statistically established that the British and North German nobility by far exceed the people generally in height and circumference of body. In Japan we find the reverse because the higher clauses take hardly any exercise. Their disposition is to sit so much over their studies that they have frequently to be driven away from purely hygienic reasons. In fact their taller and strongly built. LORD C. BERESFORD ON THE NAVY.

to loud and continued calls, replied, after Rear-Admiral Le Hunte Ward, to the tosst of the Navy. He said that he was obliged to get up and speak according to orders. (Laughter.) He cause his senior officers were present, and the last speaker had mid all that was to besaid about the Navy. This much he would say, however, that if they did not keep the Navy in that condition of efficiency which it ought to be in, they would not, perhaps, have any more of those cheery dinners. (Laughter). His reason for saying so was this. Their food supply was kept up by the transport of that food supply across the seas. The money they expended last year ont of this country to feed the people amounted to £142,000,000. The Navy could not keep that supply going if war was declared, Naval officers were continually telling the public so-that they must pay a little more in the way of insurance for keeping the Navy in an efficient state. But the naval men who were constantly telling the public this fact were told in return that they were panic-mongers. He asked them to look at the vast sums which they paid for their panics when there was a possibility of war breaking out. (Cheers.) He calculated that in the last ten years they had paid owing to these public scares no less than £5,000,000. The other day, in the House of Commons, he had the honour of submitting what he considered (perhaps he was wrong) necessary proposals to put the Navy in that condition which it was believed to be in, but which in reality it was not. (Laughter). was a mistake to believe that naval officers, who were proud to serve their country, were always desiring expenditure. They wanted, on the contrary, a large number of economical reforms. They thought that the economies which they could produce would be beneficial, such as in dockyard management, in the question of tenders for guns other than from the Woolwich department, and in the ordering home of the 38 jolly old ships which could not steam seven knots an hour, and which, if war were to break out, would all be lost. (Laughter and cheers.) Not only would the ships be lost, but they would Foodhow! ... lose the men who were working in them. He said, therefore, "Do not put the matter off, until another day; let it be put right now." (Cheers.) He concurred in the remark which had been made that the officers and men were just as good—not better, because that could not -as the brave old seamen who had made England what she was now. (Cheers.) But circumstances were changed, and we must change with them. All that naval men asked was that the people of this country should put them in a position to fight their battles, and to meet their adversaries with the same arms and ships as they would be met with (Cheers.) Foreign nations were going ahead with torpedo warfare; wewere not. Torpado warfare would be the principal element of the day if hostilities should Temperature the Navy in the condition which they desired to Direction of wind ... see it in Old England would win the day. (Cheers.) Nothing could be more appropriate in Rain this counexion than the familiar "Ready, aye ready" of the seamen; but the drawback was that we were not quite ready. He endorsed every word that had been said about civil engineers and their relationship with the Navy. Seamon would acknowledge that the basis of our principle of fighting was the civil engineer, because it was admitted that mechanical power must always beat manual power. Speed, helm, and head would win the action. (Cheers.)

The result of the proceedings now being actively taken against the Mormons will be to TITLER, PALMER & Co. drive them from Utah, and it is stated that they have selected Nevada as the place where they will make a final stand for the maintenance of the Mormon institutions. The white population in the State of Nevada is steadily decreasing, and should the mines become exhausted four-fifths of the present population are expected to leave the State. The Mormons are said to be anxious to secure themselves by immigration into Nevada until they can secure a majority at the polls. If they succeed in securing the administration of the local laws they will have enlisted for their protection the whole force of States' rights. The Mormons claim to be securing an average yearly addition of 2,000 besides their natural increase. The New York Sun observes that "the next phase of the Mormon question may be the appearance of Mormon representatives in the halls of Congress, duly accredited from a State which, though sharing nothing of the spirit of American nationality, and actually hostile, possesses equal rights and powers with every other State. Such representatives, partaking of the character of Ambassidors from a Sovereign State, may demand that its citizens shall not only not be disturbed, but shall be protected in the right to worship God and to practise their social and religious rites according to the dictates of their own consciences."

EXTRACT.

THE QUEEN. Sweet music haunts the dear old sounds That chirm'd and touch'd my childish sense: While Fascination's mystic art Asserts her strange omnipotones. Perchancea solitary name,

Breathing simplicity and power, May thrill the soul with deep delight, Or add mehantment to a flower. Soft tones, that first engage the ear. Impress the infant dawning mind:

And scotling ochoes oft are borne

Upon Life's variable wind. In early hours I learn'd to love (With child-like ardour, pure and keen) A name all ages-will adore-

Britannia's sympathetic Queen! In later days (the' storm-clouds burst, And avalanches wreck'd the scone)

His guardian augels sav'd our Queen? In after years, when locks are gray, And creeping shadows intervene, Old England, as in time of yore,

God in His mercy blust the land-

Is glorious with her peerless Queen ! The music of that dear old name. So lov'd in childhood's fleeting hour. Chimes saftly through the maze of life, And wields a sweet pathetic power.

CURIOUS EFFECT OF ARCTIC COLD. A person who has never been in the polar regions can probably have no idea of what region some notion can be formed of the extreme cold that prevails there. When we have the temperature down to zoro our houses were not as, at least, 60 deg. above zero, we should begin to talk of of Portugal during the minority of his son, freezing to death. Think, ther, of living where the thermometer goes down to 35 deg. flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing. STRANGE CAREER OF A QUEEN.

The Chicago Tribune says :- A private cable despatch says the widow of ex-King Ferdinand is coming back to Beston, her native city, to live. Ferdinand is the father of the present King of Portugal, He ? was buried with great pomp at Lisbon. B Ex-King Ferdinand was married the 10th B. of June, 1869, to Elise, Countess of Edla, née Hensler. A quarter of a century St. or more ago there lived in Boston Adolph Hensler, a musician who had also practiced his profession in Springfield. He had a daughter, a brilliant branet, whose charming manners and melodious voice attracted the attention of persons prominent in the highest circles of taste and culture at the Hub. The girl had been educated at public schools, and had profited by the facilities which her home afforded for her musical development.
